Dear Deborah

I begun this letter on Tuesday but have not had time to finish it so I now begin it. I have begun French in Annes Bijou I think by what I have seen of it that it is quite hard.

~~Malgadica~~ was married yesterday morning. we had some of the cake ashd before I received my quantam (I beg your pardon if it is not spelt right) I was firmly resolved to send you part of it to you but I could not resist the temptation.

The "fair" is a week from to day some beautiful bags have come from Hingham which Mrs Smith took ~~to~~ make and among them is a beautiful brown one with blue strings I should you not like to have that better than the black one

New Bed for the Bedford

I hope I shall come to New Bedford with you. We have not heard from Hervey yet. Hildreth has been here again and Maria wickedly & with the utmost imperturbability told him that Eastburn he had said there was an Abolition novel which was all printed and had got to be burnt and would be a loss of five hundred dollars to some body. he coutlerd up to the eyes and did not speak for a few moments but at last he uttered some commonplace remark about it.

he has managed it so craftily that it will be entirely Eastburns but he told Knap that he had rather lose his 500 than risk his reputation by printing it.

He will not let Knap go in to the room where it is because he is afraid that he will get a copy of it. do write to me the next time you write your affte sister Emma L Weston
